Editorial Review

From Booklist

Eleanor has spent half her life atoning for the accident that paralyzed her sister, Eve, when they were teenagers. Now in their thirties, the sisters live together in the South Carolina Low Country with their mother and Eve's husband. Eleanor not only does the cooking and chauffeuring, she also provides the family with a steady paycheck. When Eleanor's boss asks her to take a side job acting as caregiver for his elderly aunt Helena, she jumps at the chance—seeing it as an opportunity to spend time away from the stifling frustration she experiences at home. Little does she realize she's exchanging one dysfunctional family for another. Helena has lots of secrets to hide, and her troubles go all the way back to WWII. Eleanor and Helena get off to a rocky start but soon discover they have plenty in common, having both spent their lives trying to win forgiveness from their sisters. White moves smoothly between narrators as well as different time periods, crafting an intriguing and romantic family drama that will appeal to fans of Sarah Jio and Dorothea Benton Frank. --Rebecca Vnuk
