Editorial Review

Review

"A sharp, no-nonsense, and consistently insightful tour of the ways that inequality and injustice have shaped the climate crisis?making clear why the robust solutions are inevitably those that invest in rebuilding our fractured societies." (Naomi Klein, Author of This Changes Everything and The Shock Doctrine)

"Most books on the climate crisis are gloomy affairs: they tell us that unless we go back to living in caves and eating twigs, human life is doomed. Gar Lipow's is another matter entirely?it shows how we can lead materially comfortable lives without snuffing ourselves out through the use of already existing technologies (and a major reduction in inequality along the way). It's rare that a nuts and bolts realism is so inspiring. The obstacles to climate salvation are political, not technological." (Doug Henwood, Editor of Left Business Observer)

"Intelligent, stimulating and provocative. This book has something to teach everyone." (Denis Hayes, President of the Bullitt Foundation, Coordinator of the first Earth Day)
